

Trauma Informed SandPlay Therapy

Dr. Patricia Sherwood

22 July 2022

Why Trauma Informed SandPlay Therapy?

Trauma is characterized by unintegrated heightened experiences. These are often unconscious and stored in the right hemisphere of the brain as sensory data. Spontaneous sandplay is powerful in making conscious, the unconscious in a manner that is compassionate, soulful and transforming.

Dr Sherwood will present structured sequences to support outcomes for clients using sandplay. These directed sequences are concise, focused and transformative using repeatable sequences for a range of traumatic clinical presentations such as substance addictions, cutting, depression, grief and suicide ideation.

Trauma informed sandplay processes facilitate the processing, release and transformation of trauma and promote mental health recovery for clients.

This workshop is suitable for practitioners who have some experience in sandplay therapy. Participants need to have access to a tray with sand and figurines for the session.
